REPORTING OF BILL PLEASES MERCHANTS

Fake Auction Measure Has Passed
House and Should Soon Pass
Senate, Says Johnson.

"I am sure that every merchant in Washington and the public generally, is grateful for the prompt action of Senator Allee Pomeroy, of Ohio, chairman, and the other members of the Judiciary subcommittee of the Senate District Committee, in reporting out the fake auction bill yesterday," said Charles J. Columbus, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association, which is responsible for the measure.

"One of the latest complaints to come to the office of the Retail Merchants' Association was that of a gray-haired lady, the wife of a G. A. R. man, who was imposed upon at a fake auction with a no-account watch. The fake auctioneer is no respecter of persons.

"The fake auction bill has already passed the House. In submitting a report to the body Representative Ben Johnson, who introduced the bill at the request of the Retail Merchants' Association, declared that Washington seems to have become the Mecca for fake auctions. Not only local residents, but thousands of visitors from the States are made their victims.

"Unfortunately there is no present law to catch the fake auctioneer, but the bill now before the Senate will certainly put an end to this nefarious practice, and we have every reason to expect that the Senate will take the short time necessary to give the District and citizens of the country generally the benefit of this very necessary legislation before adjournment."
